ORDER

This is a proceeding under Title II of the Social Security Act, proceeding under 42 U.S.C. §§ 401, et seq., in which plaintiff requested review of the Commissioner's decision denying her application for disability benefits. Plaintiff's claims were denied initially. On July 20, 2004, an administrative law judge (ALJ) rendered a decision in which he found that Plaintiff was not under a "disability," as defined in the Act. On December 4, 2004, the Appeals Council of the Social Security Administration denied plaintiff's request for review. Thus, the ALJ's decision stands as the final decision of the Commissioner. Plaintiff's appeal is before the Court on Plaintiff's motion for judgment (Doc. No. 11). Defendant, in her response, moves to reverse and remand this matter (Doc. No. 14).¹ The facts and arguments are presented in the parties' briefs and will not be repeated here.

¹Defendant states that after review of the above-captioned case, agency counsel requested the Appeals Council of the Social Security Administration reconsider the Commissioner's decision, and upon review, the Appeals Council determined that remand was appropriate for further consideration of plaintiff's claim. Plaintiff has filed a response to this motion (Doc. No. 15) indicating she has no objections to defendant's proposal to reverse and remand this matter.

Section 205(g) of the Social Security Act, 42 U.S.C. § 405(g), provides for judicial review of a “final decision” of the Commissioner of the Social Security Administration under Title II. Judicial review of the Commissioner’s final decision under 42 U.S.C. § 405(g) (1994) is limited to whether there exists substantial evidence in the record as a whole to support the decision of the Commissioner. Siemers v. Shalala, 47 F.3d 299, 301 (8th Cir. 1995). This determination requires review of the entire record, including both evidence in support of, and in opposition to, the Commissioner’s decision. Fountain v. Railroad Retirement Bd., 88 F.3d 528, 530 (8th Cir. 1996). The Court’s role, however, is not to reweigh the evidence or try the issues de novo. Craig v. Chater, 943 F. Supp. 1184, 1188 (W.D. Mo. 1996) (citing McClees v. Shalala, 2 F.3d 301, 302 (8th Cir. 1994)). When supported by substantial evidence, the Commissioner’s findings are conclusive and must be affirmed. Richardson v. Perales, 402 U.S. 389, 401 (1971).

Substantial evidence is more than a mere scintilla but less than preponderance. It means such evidence that a reasonable mind would accept as adequate to support a conclusion. Johnson v. Chater, 108 F.3d 178, 179 (8th Cir. 1997), citations omitted. The substantial evidence standard, however, presupposes a zone of choice within which the decision makers can go either way, without interference by the courts. Clarke v. Bowen, 843 F.2d 271, 272-73 (8th Cir. 1988). “[A]n administration decision is not subject to reversal merely because substantial evidence would have supported an opposite decision.” Id. Hence, “if it is possible to draw two inconsistent positions from the evidence and one of those positions represents the agency’s finding, we must affirm the decision.” Roe v. Chater, 92 F.3d 672, 672 (8th Cir. 1996) (quoting Robinson v. Sullivan, 956 F.2d 836, 838 (8th Cir. 1992)).

An individual claiming disability benefits has the burden of proving he or she is unable to return to the type of work in which he or she was formerly engaged due to a medically determinable physical or mental impairment that has lasted or can be expected to last for a continuous period of not less than twelve months. 42 U.S.C. § 423(d) (1) (A). If the claimant succeeds, the burden of production shifts to the commissioner to establish that plaintiff can perform some other type of substantial gainful activity in the national economy. See Young v. Apfel, 221 F.3d 1065, 1069, n. 5 (8th Cir. 2000); see also, 68 Fed. Reg. 51,153 - 51,163 (August 26, 2003); 20 C.F.R. § 404.1560(c)(2).

The Court has reviewed the parties' briefs, the decision of the ALJ, the transcript of the hearing and the additional medical and documentary evidence. In this case, the Court cannot find substantial evidence on the record to support the secretary's decision. Specifically, the Court agrees with plaintiff, agency counsel and the Appeals Council that remand for further consideration is appropriate in this case. Furthermore, defendant details that the following actions will be undertaken upon remand of the case:

Upon receipt of the Court's remand order, the Appeals Council will remand this case to the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) who will be directed to: fully evaluate Plaintiff's fibromyalgia by obtaining updated medical records from Melvin Karges, M.D., including clinical findings and test results. The ALJ should also obtain a statement from Dr. Karges indicating what Plaintiff can still do despite her impairments. The ALJ will also address all of the medical opinions in the record, including the Residual Functional Capacity Battery testing performed in June 2004, and make specific finding concerning the weight entitled to these opinions and the factors considered in evaluating these opinions. Plaintiff's subjective complaints will be reevaluated in light of the new evidence obtained. The ALJ will also offer Plaintiff the opportunity for a new hearing and will obtain evidence from a vocational expert as to the existence of jobs Plaintiff could perform despite her impairments.

See Doc. No. 14, pp 1-2.

Therefore, it is ORDERED that (1) plaintiff's motion for summary judgment (Doc. No.

11), and (2) defendant's motion to remand (Doc. No. 14) are GRANTED. The decision of the Secretary is reversed and this case is remanded pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 405(g)(4) for further proceedings consistent with this Order.

IT IS SO ORDERED.
